“ I know this is like 6 years later and I should have done this sooner than now lol, but she has been on my mind a lot lately. I remember when I was living with her, all the late night conversations we would have about life, and how she couldn't wait to be there to see me accomplish the big goals in my life. Now that she's gone it has been hard on me lately. I went to my senior prom this year, and I graduated. This has absolutely killed me that she was not here to experience these moments with me. Mamaw was like my mommy, she took care of me and loved me. We might not have had our best moments together, but I loved her and thought of her so highly. I normally do not let that she's gone bother me but recently it has been the hardest thing to deal with. Her not being involved and not having her hugs and little forehead kisses have been hard to go without. I cannot tell you how many times I wished I could have her hug me and calm me down and tell me everything would be okay one last time. But I know that she's in heaven and she is looking down on me with the biggest smile and saying well done. I know that one day I will reunite with her and have the availability to give her all the hugs anyone can ever imagine. I love you mamaw forever and always and until we meet again. love Brooke <3

“ I will always remember all the good times we had together growing up, the laughter and secrets we shared. I'm so glad we remained close as we grew up and could pick up where we left off when we seen each other. We had so many good times with our girls as they grew up. I'm so glad our girls are best friends and have been since they were babies. My prayers are with your children, Eric and Brandy, you grandchildren, your parents and the rest of your family. It was truly a blessing to have known you and to have the honor of calling you not only my cousin but a great friend. I know you'll be missed by many... Rest in Peace my dear cousin.
