“ Just one more quick memory of Uncle Tony. A barter we had was for him to bail my side yard. (side pasture lol) Barter was for me I do not have a grown up pasture and he get's hay (Grass). So he decides we need to spray the weeds in the yard. Okay. He buy's the weed killer & Dawn dish soap and comes down to make sure we are mixing it right and spraying right. Sitting there watching with the hose and stuff. I turned on old country music for him. (lil Freddie Castle) Bottom line where we had to bring our (Bob and Deb's) sprayers back to him . . . where he filled our sprayers it took 1 and 1/2 yrs for the grass to grow back where he was filling them. :) lol However we trusted and Loved each one another. Dang Gonna Miss Tony Smith!! Big Time!!! Lot's of laughs and smiles we are gonna miss!!!!

“ Met Uncle Tony at our family reunion. . . . Time later he married my Aunt Joan. . . . We are Family now. . . . Time later I hear this blaring horn out front. What the heck? Uncle Tony in his Truck. Walk out there and here he had BROKE his shin to where the bone was sticking thru the skin. Now he was up the road fell off a ladder, crawled to the gate, shut and locked it, got into his truck, drove to my house. Said well I think I broke my leg. OMG. Emergency Mode. Put him in my car went to his house as he thought he might need crutches (lol) and he wanted to shower and change clothes more lol. (NOT) Well he gave me a ring full of keys and picked one out without thinking and said crutches are in that shed. Okay. He was right the key fit and crutches were in there. Funny thing is they were full of ants so I had to bang them on the driveway for a min. lol Made it to the hospital and what a tuff fella. We have bartered for a few years and he was a fair honest. Have already thought of a few ?'s and thought call Uncle Tony. He has been a GREAT FRIEND to my husband Miss You Already!! He and his Wife have raised some terrific Children!! I am Honored and Blessed to have you All in my life!! I got more but will leave this big story here.

“ Tony has been a great neighbor and friend. He will be missed at church, always there with a kind word, a smile, handshake and a song.
